Defends CIA

Based on my own experiences, I would say that, if Arthur Reagan (May 9) "had a dime for every time a CIA spokesman was caught lying," he would be penniless.

For almost 30 years, I worked closely with scores of CIA officials, at home and abroad. Consistently, I found them to be of high moral character, of superior intelligence, with sincere dedication to their profession and with love and loyalty for their country.

I admire the forthrightness of Linn's interesting story on the Viet Cong stamp and thank you for your adherence to journalistic integrity, a modern rarity.
